

THIS WAS TOMORROW

Field Guide - What Happens During a Visit

I'm a photographer and artist researching how people organise and sustain collective living. I work slowly and deliberately, spending time in places to understand how they actually function. I'm not here to write about you, validate you, or turn you into a case study. I photograph places - interiors, shared spaces, material traces of how you live together. That's it.

HOW I WORK

I photograph places, not people as primary subjects. I focus on details - how spaces are adapted, what's maintained, what's broken. Shared areas. Material traces of daily life.

If people appear in images, they're part of how the place functions - elements within the environment. Not the focus.

I don't stage anything. I observe, walk around, look closely. The pace is slow.

RECORDING & CONSENT

I might record some conversations. This is always optional. If I want to record, I'll ask directly. You can say no. You can stop at any point. No consequences.

Audio and photographs are kept completely separate. You'll never hear someone's voice explaining a photograph, and you'll never see a photo being 'illustrated' by someone's voice.

QUESTIONS I MIGHT ASK

- Is this the future you were dreaming of?
- What would you tell someone thinking about doing something like this?
- What - or who - brought you here?
- What is something that truly makes you happy?
- What is special about this place?
- What do you miss most - here, in life?

AFTER I LEAVE

You'll receive professional photographs. These are yours to use however you want - your website, archives, events, displays. Full usage rights. The work may also appear in exhibitions in 2026-27, potentially at places I visit and during Open House Festival in London. You'll be credited and involved in how it's presented.

MEDIA RELEASE & CONSENT FORM

This Was Tomorrow

Complete the 'Your Information' section, then fill out whichever applies: photography consent only, audio consent only, or both.

YOUR INFORMATION

Full Name: _____

Email: _____

Phone (optional): _____

Location / Site Name: _____

PHOTOGRAPHY RELEASE

I consent to photography and use of images from this visit for:

- ☐ Exhibition displays (in-person venues, galleries, museums)
- ☐ Online publication (website, social media, digital archive)
- ☐ Research & educational use (university courses, publications, seminars)

Restrictions or notes about photography:

AUDIO RECORDING & USE

I consent to audio recording during our visit and use of audio/interviews for:

- ☐ Exhibition playback (in-person installations, soundscapes)
- ☐ Online broadcast (podcast, website, streaming platforms)
- ☐ Research & archival use (educational materials, oral history projects)

Restrictions on audio use or sensitive topics:

FINAL CONSENT

[] I understand that images and audio may be edited, cropped, or used in combination with other materials, and I give permission for the uses indicated above.

[] I confirm I have the right to grant these permissions and that I have informed anyone appearing in photos or audio of this consent form.

Signature: _____

Date: _____

This Was Tomorrow is an Arts Council England-supported documentary project exploring community-led housing, co-housing, and community land trusts across the UK.

Enrico Policardo
info@enricopolicardo.com
+44(0)7517 420 206
enricopolicardo.com

Supported using public funding by Arts Council England (DYCP)
You can withdraw consent at any time by contacting me.

Supported using public funding by
ARTS COUNCIL ENGLAND